A Modern Journey Through the Bhagavad Gita

A STORY FOR THE DECISIONS THAT HAVE NO CLEAN SIDE

What if the person you love most is also the person you may have to hold accountable?

Kabir has spent his life solving difficult problems. This one refuses to be solved.

A decision inside the technology company he helped build has hurt real people. The evidence reaches through algorithms, old approvals and boardroom choices - and toward Rohan, his younger brother.

The board wants a decision. Their mother wants her sons at the same dinner table again. Kabir wants a choice that is right without also being painful.

He may not get one.

THIS IS WHERE THE BATTLEFIELD BEGINS.

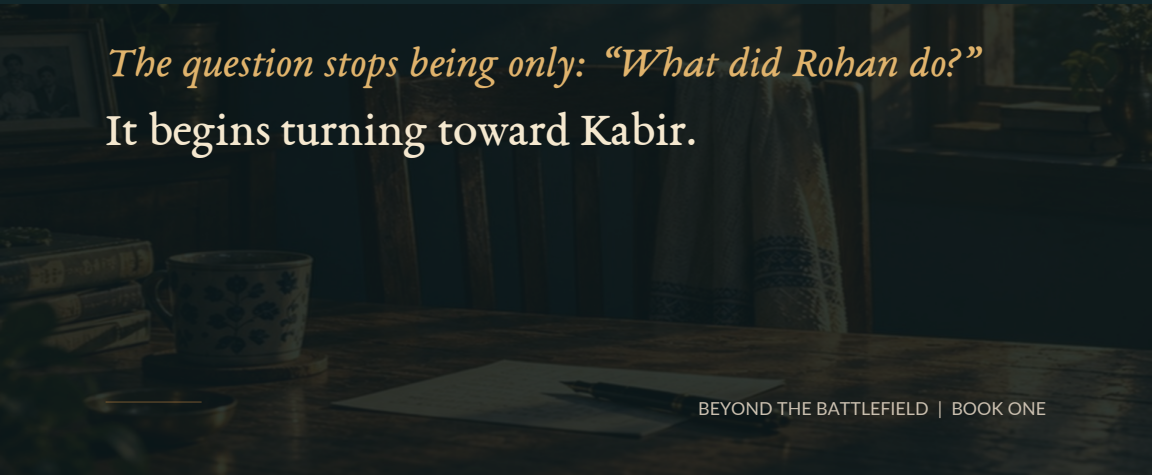

THE INVESTIGATION CHANGES DIRECTION

The closer Kabir looks at his brother, the harder it becomes to remain only the judge.

One person was protected by the decision.
Another was harmed by it.

A worker is labelled “low potential.”
His life refuses the label.

A family is trying to stay together.
Accountability will not disappear to make that easier.

The question stops being only: “What did Rohan do?”
It begins turning toward Kabir.

THE MOMENTS THAT STAY

Not revelations. Not slogans. Small human things that refuse to leave.

01 AN ORDINARY SUNDAY

A mother does not ask for a miracle. She misses one ordinary day that can never be replayed.

02 A TIFFIN. A “LOW POTENTIAL” WORKER.

A life that looks small inside a system can feel complete from the inside.

03 A WOODEN TRAIN

Grief can remain. Love can remain. Faith does not have to become a bargain for an outcome.

The biggest ideas arrive through what people do, lose, misread - and keep loving.

YOUR BATTLEFIELD MAY LOOK DIFFERENT

You do not need to know the Bhagavad Gita to recognise these questions.

01 Can I love someone and still keep a boundary?

02 Am I helping - or trying to remain necessary?

03 Would I still do the right thing if no one thanked me?

04 What have I stopped seeing because I already decided what it was?

05 Is my idea of success too small for someone else's life?

06 Can I act without owning the result?

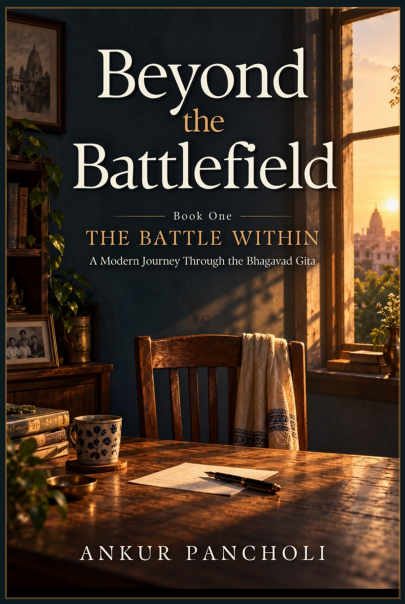

The Gita enters as a mirror - not an answer sheet.

Some questions do not end when the page does.

What if the person you love most is also the person you may have to hold accountable?

Kabir has spent his life solving difficult problems.

This one refuses to be solved.

A decision inside the technology company he helped build has harmed real people. The evidence reaches through algorithms, old approvals, boardroom choices—and toward Rohan, his younger brother.

The board wants a decision.
Employees want accountability.
Their mother wants her sons to sit at the same dinner table again.

And Kabir wants something that may not exist:
a choice that is right without also being painful.

As he searches for certainty, an older conversation begins entering his life—the Bhagavad Gita.
Not as an answer sheet.
As a mirror.

Because the deeper Kabir looks at Rohan, the company and the damage left behind, the harder it becomes to ignore another battlefield: the one inside the person doing the judging.

Beyond the Battlefield- The Battle Within is a cinematic modern journey through family, ambition, technology, grief, responsibility and the first nine chapters of the Bhagavad Gita.

Kabir begins with one question:
What should I do about my brother?

But some questions change the person asking them.
And this one has only begun.
